

STATE of WISCONSIN

OFFICE of the GOVERNOR

Proclamation

WHEREAS; recycling is the process of collecting, processing, and remanufacturing materials to reduce waste, conserve natural resources and raw materials, save energy, and prevent pollution; and

WHEREAS; Wisconsin has long been a leader in adopting conservation measures like recycling and was once home to renowned recycling advocate Milly Zantow, who not only helped write the state's first mandatory recycling law but also developed the plastic identification and sorting system that is now used worldwide; and

WHEREAS; Americans are producing more waste than ever before, and various updates to recycling procedures nationwide and internationally have created a need for increased awareness of proper recycling practices because each item recycled makes a difference; and

WHEREAS; according to the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), recycling ten plastic bottles saves enough energy to power a laptop for more than 25 hours, and recycling in the United States creates and sustains more than 680,000 jobs every year; and

WHEREAS; it is important to recycle only clean, permitted materials, as mixing trash with recyclables can cause damage to recycling equipment and raise costs for recycling facilities, so while items like office paper, cardboard, plastic bottles and containers, glass jars and bottles, and aluminum cans can often be recycled, it is necessary to keep in mind that guidelines may vary by municipality; and

WHEREAS; the best way to determine what can and cannot be recycled is to contact local municipalities directly, take note of local signage, or visit the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources' website, where information about how to recycle, what to recycle, and where to recycle various materials in Wisconsin is listed; and

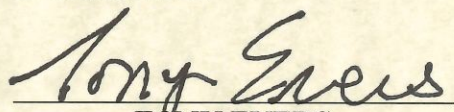

WHEREAS; today, the state of Wisconsin joins dedicated individuals and organizations throughout the state and across the country in raising awareness of the importance of recycling and how to engage in responsible recycling in communities;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Tony Evers, Governor of the State of Wisconsin, do hereby proclaim November 15, 2023, as

AMERICA RECYCLES DAY

to all our state's residents.
